PLENARY DISCUSSION: INDUSTRY'S FUTURE
ROLE IN THE DELIVERY OF NATIONAL SECURITY

The Rt Hon the Baroness Neville-Jones Minister of State for Security and Counter-terrorism, will deliver the keynote speech for this security conference.

With the formation of the National Security Council and the Strategic Defence and Security Review, a new horizon is developing for National Security.

Under the umbrella of security, the focus of the day will be National Security and Resilience. The London bombings of July 2005 underlined the threat to the UK from terrorism, but there are many other risks which have a bearing on security including pandemics and natural disasters.

On the Thursday of show week we have brought together a series of leading speakers to generate a meaningful debate around the subject of security and the role that industry plays in meeting the security requirements of the UK and other countries.

UK industry has a world-leading capability in technology, innovation and problem solving and is already developing technologies and techniques to combat terrorism and other threats to security. It is vital that this work continues. There is also an ever increasing convergence between the defence and security sectors, so the Farnborough International Airshow is an ideal platform to hold this debate. The objective is to raise the profile of the UK's National Security Strategy and the partnership that is required with industry to build on this.
